Who We Are

Studio A is a unique social enterprise based in Sydney, specifically designed to provide professional opportunities for artists with intellectual disability. As one of Australia's leading supported studios, we champion and value our artists' creative talent and individual expertise.

By offering comprehensive support systems and resources, we enable artists with intellectual disability to pursue their personal career aspirations and earn income as practising art professionals. The studio facilitates the creation of exceptional art across various disciplines, each piece reflecting the artist's unique style and inspirations.

The impact of Studio A extends beyond artistry, positively influencing the well-being of our members and in the wider community cultivating a more inclusive cultural landscape. Our artists experience increased self-esteem, improved mental health, and a sense of belonging within a supportive community.

Professionally, Studio A enables artists to network, earn meaningful income, and make a significant impact in the contemporary art scene. We actively promote diversity and inclusion by providing our artists opportunities to be widely seen and recognised, combating the stigma surrounding disability not just in the arts sector, but in the wider community.

Studio A's creative output appeals to diverse markets, including art, design, craft, and corporate sectors. The studio has established successful and enduring partnerships and collaborations, providing creative services to leading Australian corporations, institutions, and organisations. These partnerships foster the exchange of ideas with fellow professionals and contribute to innovative projects. Additionally, we host weekly workshops with invited contemporary artists, further enriching the artistic environment.

In essence, Studio A empowers artists with intellectual disability to thrive creatively, professionally, and personally. We break down barriers, promote inclusivity, and foster a vibrant and diverse artistic community.

A Message From The CEO

On a Saturday night in early January 2022 I stood together with a large collective of people in a darkened room wearing surgical masks (we were emerging from Covid lockdowns). This may not sound like a magical and connecting experience and yet it was...we were brought together by Studio A artworks. In the centre of the room glowed a series of putt putt golf inspired sculptures. Fairy floss coloured with brightly patterned facades, ethereal angelic forms seemed to hover above the putting bases. The forms were both mesmerising and a little unnerving. This was the creative vision of Studio A artist Annette Galstaun. A lover of putt putt golf, Annette is a woman deeply connected to the spirit realm. We were there to celebrate the opening of her exhibition Magical Putt Putt at Cement Fondu gallery in Paddington, Sydney.

Annette's sculptures were accompanied by a series of portraits created by fellow Studio A artists. These portraits were inspired by the theme 'sacred'. In a strange and organic synchronicity each artist depicted a parent who had passed away and a beautiful and unexpected synergy emerged between Annette's angels and the portraits. Whilst Annette's putt putt golf styled artwork was there to be literally played with it was not entirely playful work. It was also deeply thoughtful. Art about the human condition, about love, loss, death, spirituality and connection.

The Magical Putt Putt show encompasses for me an essence of what Studio A is about. Our artists have a compelling vision that they share through their visual artwork. This work provides a glimpse into a unique way of experiencing the world. Yet Studio A artwork also speaks about the universal experience. It reflects both difference and universality and it brings people with different life experiences together to play, talk and share. This theme and impact runs throughout Studio A's work.

In FY22 Studio A's achievements are diverse and many and nothing brings me more energy than seeing the pride on the face of individual artists as their work is recognised. Yet the backbone of our achievements and impact involves an incredible amount of administrative work. And this cannot be overlooked. A key success at Studio A this year has been the recruitment of our Operations Manager, Pernille Jack. This position has been enabled through the award of a multi year grant from the Vincent Fairfax Family Foundation (VFFF). We are immensely grateful for the VFFF's recognition of the importance of administrative work and its foundational importance. We are thrilled to welcome on board Pernille.

Studio A's artists, their talent and dedication is at the forefront of everything we do - as it should be. Yet supporting this success and working tirelessly in the background are our staff and volunteers who play a key role in all we achieve. I would like to pay a particular acknowledgement to my Co-founder and Studio A's Principal Artist Emma Johnston. Emma has a unique capacity to foster the creative talent of others and she shares this generously.

Our Board of Directors consists of skilled and busy professionals who volunteer their time to ensure Studio A remains focused on our strategic objectives with best practice governance.

I would like to personally thank each Director for their dedication and particularly thank our hand working and ever inspiring Chair Shane Simpson AM.

What you read in the pages of this outstanding Annual Report is the outcome of an entire community working together. Studio A's success is created by our donors, supporters, fans, families and a national community that embraces and celebrates diverse voices. I hope this report brings you a sense of pride and hope in what an effective community can foster.

A Message From The Chair

As you read this Annual Report you will be struck by the extraordinary things that people with intellectual disabilities can achieve when given the opportunity to thrive. Our artists are now exhibited in state and regional galleries, commissioned by companies and by public galleries and museums, purchased by collectors and institutions, licensed by both business and government, deliver extraordinary workshops for both corporations and governments, and co-present at important national and international conferences.

This is a place of success. It is also a place of remarkable harmony and shared vision. Much of that is due to the leadership of Gabrielle Mordy and Emma Johnson but at the heart of the organisation, are the artists themselves together with the remarkable facilitators and guest artists who work with them and share generously their talent, advice and, not a little of their soul.

None of this could happen without government and private support. The NDIS has provided our artists with the freedom to develop their skills and make money from them: both things that change their lives in profound ways. Create NSW and the Australia Council have provided important funding support and so too have private foundations. [I would particularly like to single out the extraordinary gift by the Vincent Fairfax Family Foundation that has provided three-year funding for an administrative position. Few donors want to support something as hidden as administration but in a small organisation such as ours, such a gift is transformative.] And then of course all the other philanthropists – big and small - who support the Studio. Thank you all.

Finally, my thanks to the directors on the Studio A board for their generous contribution to the organisation. Their role is unseen and unsung but without the contribution that each makes to the work of the Studio, we would not enjoy the success that this Report demonstrates.

Shane Simpson AM
Chair of Studio A

Our Impact

Studio A remains dedicated to its mission of supporting and empowering artists with intellectual disability, and we are delighted to present our third annual impact statement. Our commitment to assessing the quantifiable and qualitative effects of our activities has led us to employ a thorough Impact Assessment Methodology since 2020. This methodology enables us to comprehensively measure the transformative impact of our initiatives on our artists, the organisation, and the wider community.

We are pleased to report significant achievements and a steadfast sense of optimism for the future. The outcomes outlined in this third impact statement reflect the collective efforts of our dedicated community, including the unwavering support of our generous donors and volunteers. With great pride we share with you the remarkable accomplishments and far-reaching influence Studio A and our artists have achieved during the FY21/22 period.

Our Supporters

At Studio A, we recognise that our success is made possible by the incredible support we receive from our valued donors, funders, and dedicated volunteers. We humbly acknowledge that without their generous contributions, our endeavours would not be possible.

Through their generosity, our artists are provided with vital resources. Accessible studio space, high-quality art materials, logistical and skilled support, along with invaluable mentorships all come together to empower our artists to pursue their creative ambitions. Additionally, these contributions open doors to residencies, new commissions, and exciting challenges, enabling our artists to realise their artistic dreams. Fostering a more inclusive and equitable artistic landscape.

As we present our Annual Report for FY21/22, we gratefully acknowledge that the achievements showcased within its pages are not solely ours but a testament to the collaborative spirit of our supporters. With gratitude, we extend our heartfelt thanks to all those who have played a role in our journey. Your steadfast support has made a profound impact on the lives of our artists, and we are truly grateful for your unwavering dedication.

Exhibitions

The Archibald Prize and the Sulman Prize 2022

The Art Gallery of New South Wales
14 May - 28 August 2022

In 2022, a record five Studio A artists were recognised as finalists in the Archibald and Sulman prizes. Emily Crockford and Thom Roberts secured second-time Archibald placements. Catherine McGuinness and Meagan Pelham exhibited as finalists for the first time. Also, Victoria Atkinson placed as a finalist in the Sulman Prize.

Emily Crockford captured her close friends and Studio A colleagues, CEO Gabrielle Mordy and Principal Artist Emma Johnston. Her acrylic painting, The Patterns in the Mountains of Studio A, Best Friends Emma and Gabrielle, acts as a warm statement of friendship, featuring intricate pattern work and vivid colours.

Catherine McGuinness painted artist Rosie Deacon in Rosary and the Seagull which encapsulates Deacon's colour-filled world. Sittings for the painting involved Deacon dressing up in various costumes and McGuinness capturing her essence through art.

"Studio A has become a leading centre for artists with intellectual disability – and with four works up for the portrait prize, they're getting the recognition they deserve"

Kelly Burke, The Guardian

Thom Roberts' selected Shelly Simpson, CEO, designer and founder of Mud Australia, as his Archibald subject. Referring to Simpson as "Rachey", Rachey in the Mirror was a smaller scale piece, with the portrait being painted on a ceramic surface sourced from the Mud studio.

Meagan Pelham's entry, Romance is Love, depicts an ethereal dreamscape with Romance Was Born co-founder and designer Anna Plunkett at its centre. After their extensive collaboration, the portrait reflects Pelham and Plunkett's shared inspirations - romance and beauty - in watercolour, gouache and acrylic paint.

Victoria Atkinson exhibited this year as a finalist in the Sulman Prize. Angel Mum, Noel Humphrey memorialised Atkinson's late mother. Painted on plywood, the work is installed with a surrounding glow of neon light, representative of Atkinson's mother's shining spirit.

Following on from the exhibition at the Art Gallery of NSW, the Archibald and Sulman Prize exhibitions toured regionally through Bunjil Place, the Blue Mountains, Grafton, Wagga Wagga, Lake Macquarie and Dubbo.

Magical Putt Putt

Cement Fondu, Paddington
15 January - 27 February 2022

For the first exhibition of 2022, Studio A partnered with Cement Fondu to create a newly commissioned installation. Magical Putt Putt represented a major evolution in Studio A's partnership with Cement Fondu as they handed over their entire main gallery space for the exhibition.

Select artists from Studio A's neurodiverse community produced large-scale works that transformed Cement Fondu into a spiritual and interactive mini-golf experience. Inspired by Annette Galstaun's passion for angels and putt putt, the exhibition invited visitors to play mini-golf on the artist-designed course. Each sculpture was painted with a celestial spirit or icon, and reflected Galstaun's connection to the spiritual world. A video of Galstaun performing as a guardian angel accompanied the activity, with responses triggered by mini-golf players.

Responding to the concept of reverence Meagan Pelham, Mathew Calandra and Victoria Atkinson chose to memorialise parents who have passed. Their portraits, painted on solid wood, were haloed with coloured light and glowed in the left hand alcove of the gallery.

Thom Roberts also created the animated work Courthouse Cats for the exhibition. Working with animator Braydon Gifford, Thom created a 360 degree sporting arena where police cops battled it out in front of courthouse cats, with table tennis matches being played out in front of the animation.

Opening night of Magical Putt Putt saw an operatic performance from Galstaun and her support worker Irene Cyane, who is an opera singer by trade. There was also live drawing from contributing artists Thom Roberts, Mathew Calandra and Victoria Atkinson.

"The show highlights the importance of social engagement through collective experiences, themed around the connective forces of recreation and ritual. In Magical Putt Putt, the artists give us patrons the opportunity to challenge these thoughts and think broadly about the changing relationships between individuals and our communities."

From impulse to action

Bundanon
29 January - 12 June 2022

To celebrate the opening of the newly expanded Bundanon homestead, the Bundanon Art Museum hosted its first exhibition, From impulse to action. Located in the Southern Highlands region of New South Wales, Bundanon was once the home of influential Australian artist Arthur Boyd, and in late 2021 underwent renovations to include an exhibition space and learning centre.

Skye Saxon was selected as one of twelve contemporary artists to create new and diverse commissions which mirror and expand on the energy and practice of Boyd's experimental drawings. Saxon's passion for storytelling and performance was channelled through the series of celestial drawings she contributed to the exhibition. Her collection, Cosmic mirror doors through space and time, layered lines and shapes to depict portals to the galaxy. Mixing materials such as markers, pencils and ink, each of Saxon's drawings create an entrancing kaleidoscope of bright, metallic colours.

Skye blended a number of inspirations and narratives, and many of her works featured scribble-like designs. Her "scribble gum writing" evokes the patterns that appear on Australian gum trees and expresses the deep, magical connection between Saxon's imagination and the natural environment.

Trophy Dreams

University of NSW, Kensington
30 May - 30 August 2022

Trophy Dreams was an exhibition created in partnership with UNSW Library and UNSW Art Collection, curated by Elena Taylor. Comprised of existing and newly commissioned works from nine Studio A artists, the exhibition addressed serious issues ranging from our relationship with the spirit world to the accessibility of tertiary education through shimmering and playful aesthetics.

Emily Crockford, Victoria Atkinson and Jaycee Kim reimagined UNSW graduation attire as wearable artworks, communicating their subjective perceptions of university. Crockford expressed pride for her brother's graduation, Atkinson celebrated her academic journey and the school she attended and Kim created a graduation outfit for his own universe's educational institution, where he is a graduate and the principal. The commissioned interactive pieces brought awareness to the inaccessibility of conventional education for artists with intellectual disability.

The exhibition also included Meagan Pelham's watercolour parrots, Emily Crockford's panoramic Australian wildlife painting, comic illustrations by Greg Sindel, and artworks from Catherine McGuinness, Victoria Atkinson and Damian Showyin. Mathew Calandra's etchings, created during his UNSW Art and Design residency, were also featured alongside pieces from Annette Galstaun's Magical Putt-Putt installation, originally shown at Cement Fondu earlier in the year.

"Amongst this dance of delicious aesthetics serious subjects are addressed. Trophy Dreams addresses issues ranging from our relationship with the spirit world to the accessibility of tertiary education."

Season One

Cromwell Place, London
16 March - 27 March 2022

Studio A artist Thom Roberts and UK-based artist Cherelle Sappleton joined forces for the Art et al. facilitated Peer/Peer program. The program aimed to foster rich, collaborative practices between two geographically disconnected artists while also championing neurodiverse contemporary art.

The pair corresponded over three months (2021-2022), primarily through video messages, and discussed their shared loves of photocopying, drawing, and abstract art. Throughout this period, Thom and Cherelle created a body of work that took inspiration from both their individual art practices. Digital images were manipulated and layered behind graphic illustrations and text to produce statement visual collages.

Thom and Cherelle's works were displayed at an Art et al. pop up exhibition at Arts Project in Melbourne before it was flown across the globe to be part of Season One at Cromwell Place in London. The exhibition championed the work of neurodiverse artists, specifically featuring the results of the Peer/Peer collaborations. Excitingly, this was the first international exhibition to feature a Studio A artist.

Cementa 22

Kandos, NSW
19 May - 22 May 2022

The Cementa festival featured over 40 artists for four days and four nights of contemporary art and culture spread across the town of Kandos. The artist-led initiative focused on presenting experimental and socially engaging artworks, talks and events in a regional environment.

Both Katrina Brennan and Meagan Pelham were featured with their Kennel Crafters installation, where they transformed Kandos Crafters store into a neon-hued art display inspired by the town's resident canines. Prior to the 2022 event, Brennan and Pelham travelled to Kandos for multiple artist residencies.

The transformed shop featured hot pink fluorescent signs and Meagan Pelham's poetry, enlarged and printed on colour-reflective surfaces. The store's mascot was "Chewy", a dog sculpture surrounded in neon light, which peered out the front window at locals and event-goers. Brennan and Pelham's Kandos Crafters takeover attracted many joyful visitors, including fellow creatives and countless puppy pals.

MEAGAN
THE PELHAM

Sunset Forest

LAVO, Sydney
November 2021

Two Studio A artists, Meagan Pelham and Phillip Sidney, collaborated to create a mural for LAVO's new offices in Sussex Street, Sydney. The artwork captured LAVO's and the artists' commitment to a more sustainable Australia.

Titled Sunset Forest, the 18 square metre mural mirrors the mission of LAVO, as Meagan and Phil painted a shared vision of the future between themselves and the LAVO team. Filled with bright colours and vibrant Australian flora and fauna, their design aimed to celebrate life, and LAVO's dedication to powering a cleaner, greener future.

One of Phil's main motivations was to provide the LAVO team with a sense of calm and joy in their day to day. "The laid back kangaroo is lying down and taking a breather" said Phil of the work. "I hope my relaxing kangaroo helps the LAVO team to take a breather too."

Meagan also expressed how her's and Phil's artwork fits with LAVO's mission.

"The wombats are wonderful, I love them, they are cuddly and are in love. The dreamy colours are beautiful, like the whole world. Art will save the world. I am so proud of the mural, it makes me cry with happiness."

Pillar boxes Ausgrid

March 2022

In 2021, Ausgrid handed over five electrical pillar boxes to Studio A to transform into dynamic artworks.

The project, co-funded by IFM investors through its community grants program, commissioned five artists to paint the green pillar boxes in the themes of the five UN Sustainable Development Goals that most align with Ausgrid: Gender Equality, Affordable and Clean Energy, Decent Work and Economic Growth, Sustainable Cities and Communities and Climate Action. Additionally, the program aimed to improve the look and feel of local communities through artwork, utilising a previously unused space for community artworks.

Five Studio A artists were selected in accordance with how they resonated with each theme, showcasing their commitment to each Sustainability goal. Thom Roberts, Greg Sindel, Guy Fredericks, Victoria Atkinson and Phillip Sidney created five unique artistic expressions of these Sustainable Development Goals. Their paintings completely transformed the usually plain, green boxes into vibrant pictures of a more sustainable future for Australia.

Stadium Pop: Football Flowers

Granville Park Stadium
July 2021

Building on her previous public art achievements, Emily Crockford was selected by Cumberland City Council to design and paint a 10 metre long mural for the opening of their new Granville Park Community Sports Pavilion.

Crockford, with the help of her friend and fellow muralist Ruebszz, completed Stadium Pop: Football Flowers just prior to lockdown in 2021. The piece followed on from much of her previous works, with her focus on the Australian landscape and sustainable practices clearly on display as she captured the natural environment in extraordinary colour.

The Pavilion was named after Eric Tweedale, former Australian rugby union player, and its construction promoted sustainable building practices while providing the local area more recreational and communal spaces.

Patterns of the Loveheart Mandala

Medibank Accessibility and Inclusion Plan 2022-2024
June 2022

Emily Crockford was commissioned by Medibank in early 2022 to produce an original work for their second Accessibility and Inclusion Plan.

Her artwork Patterns of the Loveheart Mandala, displays bold, electric acrylic on canvas, with Emily's take on the mandala emphasising the cyclical, shared journey that connects us all as human beings.

The final artwork was housed in the Medibank corporate offices in Melbourne, with a digital version featuring on the cover and throughout the design of the Accessibility and Inclusion Plan. The partnership highlighted Medibank's and Crockford's devotion to creating inclusive and accessible opportunities.

Harmony Day

North Sydney Council
March 2022

Harmony Week is an annual celebration that promotes cultural respect and inclusivity for everyone who calls Australia home. For Harmony Week 2022, North Sydney Council tasked Jaycee Kim with creating an original artwork to celebrate the diverse, multicultural communities within the Council area.

In his painting, Kim presented the optimistic and colourful ideals of diversity in Studio A and North Sydney, with Luna Park surrounded by vivid orange hues and the diverse individuals and cultures within Australia and North Sydney.

The artwork was unveiled and presented to the Mayor of North Sydney, Zoe Baker, along with North Sydney Councillors, Studio A board members and the community representatives who took part in a workshop that informed the piece.

Hornsby Ku-ring-gai Hospital

Artwork by Emily Crockford and Phil Sidney

Hornsby Ku-ring-gai Hospital, together with Health Infrastructure NSW and Northern Sydney Local Health District invited Studio A to create a collection of public artworks to enhance the interior design and overall experience for patients, staff and community within the newly established Clinical Services Building's Emergency Department.

Tasked with a brief focused on themes of renewal, restoration, regrowth and the inspiring natural surrounds of the Hornsby Ku-ring-gai Hospital, Emily Crockford and Phil Sidney designed a series of paintings that reflected the beauty of the region's flora and fauna. The artworks took the form of wall decals, strategically placed throughout the new Emergency Department, bringing the vibrancy and beauty of the outside environment into the heart of the hospital.

"My painting is inspired by Hornsby Shire's nature and animals. It is a beautiful sunset in the bushland with lots of animals. Koalas, kangaroos, flying foxes, rainbow lorikeets, possums and the powerful owl which is my favourite."

Studio A Policies Animated

Greg Sindel and The University of Technology

Partnerships are at the heart of Studio A's mission as a means of promoting cultural inclusivity and accessibility. In our ongoing commitment to improving the accessibility of our policies, we embarked on a groundbreaking collaboration that brought together the expertise of Studio A's Greg Sindel, and the creative talent of students from the University of Technology Sydney (UTS).

Recognizing the inherent challenges of traditional policy documents, which often feel distant and unengaging, we sought a transformative approach. Greg Sindel, known for his ability to convey complex ideas through captivating visual narratives, was commissioned to translate Studio A's policies into an imaginative medieval adventure. With his finely honed creative talents, Greg embarked on illustrating our policies, breathing life into what was once a colourless, text-based document.

To further enhance the accessibility and engagement of the policies, we partnered with Animation and Design students from UTS to animate the illustrations. Under Greg's expert guidance, the students utilised their skills to bring the colourful world of Studio A's policies to life. This collaboration not only enriched the students' academic curriculum but also empowered them to contribute meaningfully to our mission.

The result of this remarkable partnership is a vibrant and captivating reference point that transcends the limitations of traditional policy documents as well as traditional pedagogical conventions. The illustrated and animated policies are now accessible to all, enabling our artists, staff, volunteers, and community to understand their rights and responsibilities with ease.

"Once Greg did his talk, they were all fans. He changed their value system about the way they viewed art, expression and their own practice. It also made them view intellectual disability in a completely different way."

Deborah Szapiro, UTS Media Arts & Production Lecturer, on Greg Sindel's impact on her students.

Meagan Pelham x Romance Was Born

Just in time for Valentine's Day, February 2022 saw the release of Meagan Pelham's third partnership with the Australian fashion label Romance Was Born. A "Lover of Love", Romance Was Born again displayed Pelham's romantic, dreamy styles for the new capsule collection. Her charm-filled, glamorous designs fit perfectly with Romance Was Born founders and designers Anna Plunkett and Luke Sale's passion for love and storytelling. The selection included full-length dresses, frilled bags and multicoloured t-shirts filled with beautiful designs, textiles, proclamations of love and poetic extracts.

Meagan said of the collection, "I am an artist and poet and I work with Anna (and Luke) from Romance was Born. I designed clothes with love poetry writing and my Beauty and the Beast rose flowers. I love writing about romance and love... Love is LOVE! People find LOVE!"

Alongside the new collection, Motel Picture Company worked with Romance Was Born to film a whimsical collaborative short interview/love story with Meagan at its centre. A Romance Story with Meagan Pelham featured Meagan dressed in a piece from her collection, waltzing with her sweetheart, as she speaks on what love means to her.

"Perhaps the label's most fitting collaboration to date is their collection designed with studio A artist Meagan Pelham. A fellow "lover of love", Pelham's ultra-romantic art and sentimental musings on love are the perfect fit for Romance Was Born's similarly emotional and exaggerated designs."

Incognito Art Show 2022

The Incognito Art Show, one of Australia's largest and most inclusive art shows, united over 1,400 artists to support Studio A through donations of artwork. In 2022, over 3,500 A5 postcard-sized artworks were available to purchase for just $100, regardless of artist.

Inclusivity was a key directive for the art show. Artists' identities were revealed to buyers only when they purchased the artwork. This practice promoted a real connection between the consumer and the artist. It allowed smaller artists the same opportunities as well-known, named artists.

The funds raised by Incognito allowed Studio A to engage emerging and established artists through our guest artist program, paving more professional pathways and connecting and supporting diverse Australian artists.

The opening supporter evening for the Art Show provided an opportunity to premiere and celebrate 'Inside Studio A'. The documentary-style short film was a unique peek into the magical world of Studio A, highlighting five Studio A artists: Mathew Calandra, Thom Roberts, Catherine McGuinness, Jaycee Kim and Meagan Pelham and Studio A's founder Gabrielle Mordy.

Art to Roam

Studio A for the International Fund for Animal Welfare

In October 2021, Studio A joined forces with the global not-for-profit International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW), Australian auction house Leonard Joel, and supported studios across the globe for the international online auction event - Art To Roam.

In the first event of its kind, artists from supported studios in Sydney, Melbourne, Perth, London, Washington D.C., Seoul, Calgary, Glasgow and Chicago worked together to produce the worldwide auction to benefit both the artists and also Africa's wild animals and the places they call home. Amidst the challenges brought on by the pandemic in 2020, the online auction allowed artists and studios to continue to work and grow throughout the pandemic.

The hugely successful initiative featured five Studio A artists: Annette Galstaun, Daniel Kim, Thom Roberts, Catherine McGuinness and Emily Crockford, and 8 of their artworks. The auction raised a total of $53,200. The auction then split the sum between IFAW's Room to Roam conservation project in Africa and the artists from the studios who generously donated their works for the event.

The Room to Roam project aims to create a connected conservation network that protects elephants and other wildlife as they travel between their natural habitats and the human communities that have grown to surround them.

Affordable Art Fair, Randwick + Flow and Glow Artist Market, Wynyard

The revival of in-person market events in 2022 was wholeheartedly welcomed, renewing opportunities for artists to engage and connect with their audiences. For buyers it offered the thrill of exploring and discovering new art and talent.

Catherine McGuinness worked in collaboration with Studio A guest artist Shan Turner-Carroll to create an avant-garde princess costume, which debuted at the Flow and Glow Artist Market on the 26th and 27th of May 2022.

Shan Turner Carroll's practice merges elements of performance and sculpture, often using miscellaneous materials to craft experimental garments to be photographed. The two artists attended the event in costume as a regal 'Princess and Prince Charming' duo, presenting a beautiful arrangement of McGuinness' artwork available for purchase.

The art market was curated by Consuelo Cavaniglia and Abigail Moncrieff as a part of Flow and Glow, a two-day program of panel conversations, music and art in Wynyard Lane, Sydney city.

We were also delighted to exhibit at the Affordable Art Fair Sydney as the official charity partner. As an international event we were thrilled to be part of the fair's Sydney debut, which ran 2 - 5 June at Royal Randwick Racecourse.

Studio A presented a strong female front with works by Catherine McGuinness, Emily Crockford, Meagan Pelham and Katrina Brennan amongst others. The event welcomed 34 emerging and established galleries, exhibiting a vast collection of original Australian contemporary artworks available for purchase. The fair proved to be a resounding success with numerous sales and positive outcomes.

Pink and Green Mango, The Langston, Epping

Thom Roberts artist residency

On the ground level of The Langston residential tower, Pink and Green Mango emerged as a pop-up project space occupied by Thom Roberts with support from Studio A guest artist Simon Wheeldon. Throughout the month of June Thom filled the space with light and colour by creating artworks that share his unique creative vision with the Epping community.

During his time as artist-in-residence Thom played with found materials, creating bold paintings inspired by the locals. Thom connected with numerous residents, inviting them to sit for portrait drawings, fostering community involvement in the development of his work.

As an aficionado of very tall buildings, Thom was very happy to meet with the building's Principal Architect, Farhad Haidari, whom he affectionately dubbed Bert. Pink and Green Mango was proudly hosted by The Langston, Epping and supported by Cbus Property along with Reactive Consulting.

1000 Year Old Magical Travellers, Museum of Contemporary Art

Skye Saxon and Kristel Saxon

In 1000 Year Old Magical Travellers Skye Saxon performed interactive energy readings direct from her magical universe featuring a 1000-year-old wizard and an umbrella. Supported by her twin sister Kristel, playing the role of her son, Skye invited audience members to help shape an energy drawing in the air surrounding them. Cast by her umbrella the drawings brought protection to the recipients.

The performance was part of a series of events at the Museum of Contemporary Art for MCA Late, activating the museum late into the evening with special exhibition tours, workshops and a DJ set on the rooftop terrace, with an overall focus on accessibility, and artists who work within the disability community.

“Having never been there before, Sydney is a pretty magical place. After getting to know the people there, they are pretty magical themselves. I was happy to share my way of life with them.”

In FY21/22 Studio A and our artists received recognition across a variety of media outlets with twenty-four inclusions and features. The Guardian story Archibald Prize 2022: the small Sydney studio breaking ground by arts writer Kelly Burke provided a significant piece of coverage for the studio. The article reported the success of our Archibald Prize finalists Emily Crockford, Catherine McGuinness, Meagan Pelham and Thom Roberts to a readership of over 6.4 million, almost one third of all Australians.

The studio was also recognised across a number of arts journals and digital arts platforms with arts industry website Arts Hub publishing Arts and disability: the impact of representation on a national platform. The piece delved into the significance and impact of the studio's 2020 mural commission Love owls and mermaids singing in the rainbow pop at the Art Gallery of New South Wales. The story included insightful interviews with Studio A CEO/Artistic Director Gabrielle Mordy and members of the AGNSW team.

Emily Crockford was also interviewed by the National Association of Visual Arts (NAVA) to be featured on their long running Artist Files series, a platform that has showcased some of Australia's most esteemed contemporary artists since 2014.

Additionally our artists were the subjects of articles in fashion magazines Harper's Bazaar and RUSSH and the journal of online fashion retailer The Iconic. These features underscore the studio's extensive reach and its ability to engage a diverse and broad audience.

Studio A's media attention garnered throughout the 2021/22 period, made significant contributions in spotlighting artists with intellectual disability. The publicity recognises the talent of our artists as prominent and valued members of the Australian arts community and showcases Studio A as a leading supported studio.

"In just six years, Studio A has established a workplace where its artists' unique visions of their worlds are shared, nurtured and finely honed to a level of uncompromising professionalism."

Kelly Burke, The Guardian, 12 May 2022

"The Studio has worked towards cultivating a space of inclusion, one that reduces stigma surrounding disability and neurodiversity, and is committed to increasing visibility."

Madeline Kenzie, RUSSH, 6 January 2022

"The AGNSW recently acquired a work by Mathew Calandra, and (Maud) Page (Deputy Director of the Art Gallery of NSW) is keen for another collaboration with Studio A. 'Their work just keeps going from strength to strength,' Page says. 'I just find a lot of joy in what they do.'"

Elizabeth Fortescue, Mosman Daily, 21 April 2022

"There is a misconception that the art produced by artists with intellectual disability will not be very high quality. Studio A is driven to change this stereotype by ensuring the broadest possible audience gets to experience our artists' work."

Once people experience the artwork, the quality of the artwork itself transforms perceptions."

Giselle Buetti, Arts Hub, 16 August 2021

Inside Studio A

Part documentary, part colourful editorial, 'Inside Studio A' is a unique peek into the magical world of Studio A. Getting to the heart of how art and Studio A defines the artists' worlds, and in turn how they reimagine and impact the world around them.

In 2020 creative producer Amelia Bowe reached out, as a fan of Studio A, to generously offer her time as a volunteer. Studio A was in need of an 'about' video with a difference and Amelia had the skills to make it happen. With that, 'Inside Studio A' was born.

Over the course of two days in late 2021 Amelia and her team, led by Director Cybele Malinowski, sat down with five Studio A artists, Mathew Calandra, Thom Roberts, Catherine McGuinness, Jaycee Kim and Meagan Pelham, along with Studio A's co-founder Gabrielle Mordy. The team listened to our artists' stories and captured them on film to champion their voices and abilities.

The beautiful video is the result of the hard work and talent lent to Studio A by an exceptional pro-bono team of creatives. It captures the essence of Studio A, our artists, their joyful energy and their talent and became the centrepiece of our EOFY22 donations campaign.

Australia Council Digital Strategist-in-Residence Program

Thom Roberts by Cybele Malinowski.

Selected by the Australia Council for their inaugural Digital Strategist-in-Residence Program, Studio A was one of several arts organisations to join the program and team up with a digital specialist.

Paired with Elyse Maberely and Sam Hemphill, the exceptional team behind Meeum, we worked over many months to audit our digital capacity, identify gaps, ideate and explore opportunities to expand our digital activity. Ultimately developing a robust digital strategy for Studio A that better supports our artists and our mission.

Constituents from right across the company were involved in the process, from the artists to Board members. With this holistic approach Meeum helped Studio A to establish six priority areas with the top of the list - a new fit for purpose e-commerce solution.

“Bringing everyone together to overlook all aspects of the organisation through a digital lens was eye-opening for the team. It reinforced and clarified with everyone that we are running a digital business.”

Income

Where our funding came from in FY22

Fundraising

Donations made up 14% of our FY22 income and we are incredibly grateful to all our donors for their generous contributions. Donations are critical to the success of our artists.

Grants

Create NSW is the main contributor of grants for Studio A. We are the recipient of multi-year program funding from Create NSW of $110,000 per annum.

We are also the recipient of a three year grant of $100,000 per annum from the Vincent Fairfax Family Foundation providing multi core operational and capacity building support for Studio A.

Artwork / Merchandise Fees

Income from the sale of artwork has continued to grow in FY22, reflecting the professional development of Studio A artists. Continued growth in artist fees is key to the success of Studio A as a social enterprise.

Artwork / Merchandise Sales

Artwork and Merchandise sales made up 33% of our overall income in FY22. Even with limited face-to-face sales opportunities due to COVID-19, this demonstrates the value placed on Studio A creations in the community and the demand for the work of our artists.

COVID Funding

COVID funding largely consists of Federal Government COVID-19 support in the form of JobKeeper.

Other

Studio ARTES is a certified NDIS Service Provider and manages the NDIS funding requirements of Studio A's artists. Other income includes artist funding, one on one funding and community access income received from the NDIS on behalf of artists.

Expenditure

How our funding was used in FY22

Administration

Administration costs are kept to a minimum at Studio A and account for just 1% of our overall expenditure. This includes travel/fuel costs, accounting, audit fees and insurances.

Artistic

Artistic expenses are at the core of what we do and make up the bulk of Studio A expenditure. This includes payments to our artists, art consumables, framing/printing, artistic staff salaries and guest artist costs.

Studio

This is the cost of 'keeping the lights on' at our Crows Nest studio and includes rent, cleaning, IT support and depreciation.
